FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF WITH NEW STARTUP

New Oracle Applications Consulting Company has Deep Roots

Dallas, Texas (PRWEB) January 21, 2008 -- In 1994 Rob McMillen and John Stouffer were instrumental in organizing a new company, Computer Systems Authority (CSA). CSA grew from an initial $10,000 investment into a nationally recognized Oracle partner working with hundreds of clients. Now, two of the original founders of CSA are re-uniting again in the start of a new company, Triora Group LLC.

"I am excited about what we can offer because many Oracle customers want a business partner that offers more than just technology skills," said Rob McMillen, President. "Clients value a partner that has a business perspective and can also help them better leverage Oracle technology across their organization with a view to driving value to the bottom-line. As part of my commitment to providing high quality services I am also announcing that John Stouffer will be joining my new organization."

John Stouffer will be the Director of Sales and Marketing for the Triora Group. Recognized in 2004 as the International Oracle Applications User Group Member of the Year, Mr. Stouffer has over 20 years of Oracle database and over 16 years of Oracle Applications expertise. For the last 10 years he has been a popular speaker at Oracle Applications Users Group and Oracle Open World conferences. Mr. Stouffer served as the founding chair of the OAUG Oracle Fusion Council and currently chairs the OAUG Upgrade Special Interest Group. In April he will be presenting in Denver at Collaborate 2008.

Mr. McMillen has over 30 years of technology experience and has worked with Oracle products since 1993. He has held leadership positions with Friedman and Associates, Data General, Computer System Authority, Dataskills Corporation, Troubadour LTD, Solution Beacon LLC and MBNA Hallmark Systems. During his career he has worked in various technology roles as a software developer, systems analyst, DBA, systems administrator, development manager, project manager, and storage area network manager.
